Two-inch (2-in.) planks shall be used in all types of staging when the distance between supports does not exceed ten feet (10 ft.), and when the span exceeds ten feet (10 ft.), three-inch (3-in.) planks shall be used. The distance between supports lengthwise with the ship shall not exceed sixteen feet (16 ft.) in this type of staging.

3. Wherever possible, stage planks shall be installed and kept close together and staging shall be at least thirty-six inches (36 ins.) wide.

SLIP-STAGINGS.

4. Uprights thirty feet (30 ft.) or more in height shall consist of two pieces of not less than 4" by 6" lumber or of material of equal strength. Holes through uprights for spall-pins shall be so spaced that it will not be necessary to use blocking with spalls.

5. Uprights shall be set in pairs not less than five feet (5 ft.) apart whenever possible, and in no case less than three feet (3 ft.) apart.

6. Uprights shall be sufficiently braced to withstand wind-pressure and vibration. Braces shall be of not less than 2" by 6" lumber or material of equal strength.

7. Feet of uprights shall be securely fastened to the timber of dock or building way floor.

8. Spall-pins shall be not less than three-quarter inch ($\frac{3}{4}$ in.) round steel and shall project at least two inches (2 ins.) beyond uprights at each end when in place.

If a shackle is used here a forelock shall be used on the bolt.

74. Wherever possible plates shall be handled on and off hulls by means of a shackle and shackle-bolt. A forelock shall be placed on the end of the bolt. When a plate being placed on a hull has no holes to receive a bolt, a clip or clips may be welded on the plate, these to have a hole to receive the bolt, or a "screw" clamp of adequate design may be used.

75. No person shall ride a load or hook.

76. All shell-plates, longitudinal beams, frames, and other members, if so located as to be likely to fall, shall be secured at three (3) points, at least, before slings are disconnected.

GOGGLES.

84. Properly fitting goggles or other suitable protection shall be worn wherever workmen are engaged in occupations in which there is a recognized eye-hazard from flying objects, molten metal, injurious light or heat rays, or when handling material liable to injure or irritate the eyes.

85. Goggles or hoods shall always be worn by workmen when pouring babbitt, or on any similar work, and every precaution shall be exercised to see that no moisture remains in the space to be filled with babbitt or other metal.

86. In occupations where workmen are required to use goggles a large proportion of the time, each workman shall be supplied with his own individual pair, and when transferred to another workman they shall be sterilized.

VENTILATION.

87. Forepeak, afterpeak, deep, settling and fuel tanks, double bottoms, chain lockers, and cargo spaces shall be effectively ventilated while men are covering plates with bitumen, or are painting.

88. Effective ventilation shall be provided for all compartments in which dangerous or noxious fumes, gas, or smoke are encountered, or in which the air contains less than twenty per cent. (20%) of oxygen.

89. Where effective ventilation cannot be provided, workmen shall wear air-line respirators unless the job is of short duration, when other suitable respirators may be worn.

TOOLS.

90. No power-tool of any description shall be raised or lowered to or from decks or staging by the air-hose or power cable. A line shall be provided for this purpose.

91. When air-tools are not in use the tool inserts shall be removed or the air shall be turned off at the manifold. Air-jacks shall not be left unattended while in position.

92. Hammers, sledges, drift-pins, wedges, punches, chisels, and similar tools shall be kept free of mushroom-heads. Handles shall be of sound material, kept smooth, and securely fastened to tool-heads.

94. The colour "RED" shall be used for acetylene, "WHITE" for air, "GREEN" for oxygen, and "YELLOW" for other gases.

95. Air and gas manifolds shall be so located as to be safely accessible for hose connections.

96. Air manifolds shall be equipped with suitable cocks which will effectively bleed the air from the hose before disconnecting lines.

97. Every care shall be taken to keep all staging, ladders, stairways, and hatches as free from hose as possible.

98. The regulator valves used on acetylene, oxygen, or other gas cylinders shall be regularly examined and kept in repair.

99. Leaking regulators shall not be used.

100. A torch with leaking valves shall not be used. Care shall be taken to keep all valves tight and in good order.

101. All hoses used for burning and welding shall be inspected at frequent intervals to determine their condition. If the condition of the hose is uncertain, it shall be submerged in water and an air-pressure fifty per cent. (50%) above the working-pressure applied. If air-bubbles appear or if the hose is found to be in an unsafe condition, it shall be discarded or be repaired and tested again before it is used.

102. Gas cylinders shall not be handled in slings.

103. Every precaution shall be taken to prevent sparks or flames from welding or cutting torches coming in contact with cylinders.

104. All charged gas cylinders shall be protected against undue absorption of heat from the sun, forges, or open flames.

105. No person shall play a burning torch on gas tanks or regulators.

106. No person other than a manufacturer shall transfer acetylene, oxygen, or hydrogen gases from one tank to another.

BURNING AND WELDING.

107. Suitable goggles and gloves shall be worn by burners. Ragged or oil-soaked clothes shall not be worn.

108. Materials giving off fumes shall not be burned without sufficient ventilation, unless proper respirators are worn by all workmen exposed to fumes.

109. Every precaution shall be taken to protect workmen when burners are working above them. This situation shall be avoided whenever possible.
